Allows the caster to communicate their thoughts into any living being in a way they understand. While the target may be too stupid to be able to comprehend or consider the information, they do understand it. The spell allows for 3 lines of thought through communication. 3 subjects can be discussed (one-way), and as long as the caster does not switch subjects, the communication is counted as singular.

Long Thought

Orderly Sphere	-	The Dragon Source
Rank: 2		Rng: 0
Cost: 3 SpP		AoE: Caster
CsD: 2		Dur: Special
CsI: 8 Marks		Res: None

The caster thinks on a subject and falls into a slumber. The slumber lasts until the caster wishes to end. Any damage or physical nudge will make the caster aware of their surroundings, but only breaks the spell if they choose. With each passing day, more and more wisdom and understanding is gained about the subject. While things unknown are not brought to light, every aspect of what is known is reviewed, analyzed and scrutinized. In general, at 100 days, the subject is thoroughly reviewed and no more wisdom can be garnered. Therefore, each day reveals about 1% of the total wisdom.

Any treasure precious to the caster becomes an extension of their own skin, in that they can feel things touching it. This remains for all time, but the sensation diminishes the further the treasure, or piece of treasure is from the caster. The caster can always disenchant the entire treasure to remove a single coin, but never a single item at a time is either removed or enchanted.
